Man recounts being robbed on Smither Drive

By Ben Carlson
News staff

Police are searching for a suspect who robbed a maintenance worker last Saturday morning at an apartment complex on Smither Drive.
Victim James McMurray of Frankfort told police he was getting some tools out of a pickup truck when a man walked up behind him, stuck a blunt object in his back and threatened to kill him if he didn't hand over some money.

"I couldn't tell what he shoved in my back, he just told me to give him all of my money," McMurray said in an interview Monday afternoon. "At first I thought it was a joke, but then he said I had two seconds to empty my pockets or my guts would be all over the back of the truck."
The apartment complex is located just off the south-bound lane of US 127, across from Honeysuckle Lane.

B-double-E-double-R-U-N Beer run!

Suspect nabbed in Burger King bathroom after fleeing with Bud Light

From staff reports

A man went on a beer run at a local super-market, and then allegedly ran off with the booze.

Rodney Daniels "JB" McClanahan, 26, of Cynthiana, snatched two 18-packs of Bud Light beer cans and took off running into the Walmart parking lot last Wednesday afternoon with a store manager chasing him on foot, according to a report filed by the Lawrenceburg Police Department.

According to city police officer Josh Satterly, McClanahan threw the beer up against a fence on U.S. 127 Bypass and fled into the nearby Burger King restaurant to hide.

When police located McClanahan in the Burger King bathroom, according to the department's report, McClanahan appeared "very intoxicated and unsteady on his feet."
Police did not administer a blood alcohol test for McClanahan, according to the report.

Satterly said McClanahan was charged with first and second offense alcohol intoxication in a public place and theft by unlawful taking — shoplifting. The stolen beer was valued at $27.94, according to the report.

When asked about his motives in stealing the beer, McClanahan told the officer that he has had an alcohol addiction since he turned 21, Satterly said.

"We get theft calls at Walmart, but not particularly like this," Satterly said. "It's usually merchandise you can resell."

McClanahan will be in district court at 9 a.m. for an Aug. 16 arraignment.

Group socializes, supports each other

It's Monday morning and Lawrenceburg's "Fit N' Fun Girls" are working to get their heart rates up, like they have been for almost a decade since their fitness group first formed.

Back in 2002, about six Anderson County women gathered at the United Methodist Church's gym to get their one-hour work out.

Now officially the Fit N' Fun Girls, the group has grown to 30 women who stretch and sweat every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 9 a.m. in the First Christian Church gym on Main Street.

"I don't think we had any expectation about it growing to this size," Mona Simpson, one of the original members of Fit N' Fun Girls, said.

Fit N' Fun Girls don't have any grand expectations for their exercise classes, either. It's not a weight-loss class, the women say, but a "head to toe" body recall course.

With an average age of about 70, members said (although the class is open to all ages), it's

Police chief refutes woman's coercion claim

Atkins says state police interviewed woman who says officers used gun, threatened to take away kids

By Ben Carlson
News staff

The Lawrenceburg Police Department had nothing to do with a defendant's claims that police coerced her at gunpoint and threatened to take away her children if she didn't admit to a crime.

That's the stance being taken by acting Lawrenceburg Police Chief Chris Atkins, who refuted an article in last week's edition of The Anderson News which accurately reported on a motion filed in District Court that accused his department of coercion.

Atkins acknowledged that the motion, which was filed and signed by Frankfort attorney Sheilah Kurtz, claims Lawrenceburg police interviewed defendant Heather Hume, but said Hume was instead arrested and interviewed by the Kentucky State Police.

Hume, 32, of 201.5 Saffell St., was charged last August with falsely reporting an incident when a man at that address, Zachary Penwell, allegedly shot himself in the leg to avoid paying rent and claimed he was robbed.

Hume called police following the incident, but later admitted she knew that Penwell was planning to stage the robbery, according to an arrest report on file.

In a motion to suppress that admission, attorney Sheilah Kurtz of Frankfort wrote that Hume was interviewed twice by Lawrenceburg police officers — the first time with video

Filing deadline nears for city council, school board

From staff reports

Only two incumbent city councilman and one school board member had filed for re-election this fall as for Monday afternoon. The deadline to file is 4 p.m. Aug. 14 and, so far, filings have been few and far between for six city council and three school board seats. Incumbent city councilmen Bobby Durr and Tommy Vaughn have filed, along with challengers Troy Settles, Dan Stumph and Allen Kays. The election for the city's six council seats is held every other year on a non-partisan basis, meaning there are no primary run-offs and an unlimited number of candidates can enter the ring. The six who receive the most votes among city residents win. The election for mayor is held every four years, and is not on this year's ballot. The school board, which has five precincts, is also non-partisan but decided by voters only in a candidate's district. This year, districts 1, 2 and 5 are open. In District 1, incumbent Scott Brown has filed but has no opposition so far. Brown was appointed to the seat about a month ago after Benita Young resigned. Steve Higgins is the incumbent in District 2, but has not filed for re-election. In District 5, Lee Hahn, who also hasn't trict 2 includes the West Lawrenceburg, Witherspoon and East Lawrenceburg precincts. District 5 includes the Hickory Grove, Western and McBrayer precincts. Also on the ballot this year are three seats on the county-wide Soil Conservation Board. Only James Grider had filed for a seat as of Monday afternoon. The other race on the November ballot pits incumbent state Rep. Kim King (R-Harrodsburg) against challenger Kent Stevens (D-Lawrenceburg).

and audio, the second with just audio. "A review of the audio reveals the critical oral admission was the result of police misconduct," Kurtz wrote in her motion, which was filed in May and has yet to be ruled on. "Specifically, during the course of the second interview, the detective brandished and pointed a pistol at Hume and threatened Hume." A trial in the case is scheduled to begin today (Wednesday) at 9 a.m. in Anderson District Court. Kurtz was asked about the allegations against the Lawrenceburg Police Department before last week's article appeared, but declined to comment. Several attempts to reach her by phone since that time have been unsuccessful, and Kurtz has not responded to voicemails.

Asked if he was frightened, McMurray said, "Heck yes, at least a little bit." McMurray told police that he gave the suspect $80 to $85 in cash, but never got a good look at him. He said by the time he turned around, all he saw was the suspect walking away wearing a camouflaged hoodie and blue jeans. McMurray told police that the suspected jumped a chain link fence and ran down Berdine Way, and that he could not determine the suspect's race. Deputy Chad Cox with the Anderson County Sheriff's Office is investigating the case. In his report, Cox wrote that he and a trooper with the Kentucky State Police searched the area and spoke with residents on Berdine Way and Sycamore Estates, but no one had seen anyone suspicious. McMurray said it was a scary feeling being robbed. "That was a first for me, and hopefully it will be the last," he said.

said (although the class is open to all ages), it's a "do what you can" system. Some can stand and rotate their arms in small circles, for example, while others perform the same exercise sitting down.

Geraldine Trent, now one of the leaders of the exercise class along with Betty Benningfield, said she started attending the Fit N' Fun Girls group for rehabilitation after her open-heart surgery.

"I got to choose this rather than go back to the hospital," she said.

She kept attending the fitness classes despite a cancer diagnosis four months later, and a shingles outbreak after that.

"And [the group leader] brought me right out of it," Trent said.

Agnes Whitehead, 93, said she's been attending Fit N' Fun Girls classes for about two years.

Her favorite part about the class? "The break," she said jokingly.

"I just like being with them, being with people," Whitehead said of the Fit N' Fun Girls, who added she's made many new friends after joining. "It's just good to get out."

Instructors call out the next exercise during a group session of the Fit n' Fun Girls at First Christian Church.

The Fit N' Fun Girls definitely get out and socialize, including regular trips out to eat.

On Monday one member brought in a cake to celebrate Benningfield's and Trent's birthdays, with all of the Fit N' Fun ladies singing "Happy Birthday" to the two women.

Freda Walker, one of the original members of the Fit N' Fun Girls, said they've all worn pink breast cancer awareness shirts in honor of members who were breast cancer survivors.

"It's more than just an exercise group, it's a [morally] supporting group," Laverne Brumley, another Fit N' Fun Girl, said.

That doesn't mean the women don't get a good workout, Simpson said. It's a total body, physical workout.

"I think you can tell a difference if we're not here," she said, referring to her recent two-week absence from the group while Simpson was in Pennsylvania.

There's no "gymnastics," Trent said, or fancy equipment except for small 2- to 3-pound weights. Each member donates a dollar to cover the cost of using the church gym.

No music plays on loudspeakers in the gym (although if the acoustics were better, they'd probably play music, some of the women say).

The gym is anything but silent.

Trent does point out one member, Joyce, who taps her feet at a break-neck pace during one series of exercises, saying "That's our girl!"

The women count out the number of stretches, a few laughing in relief when they move on to the next set.

"We do have a few that chat a lot," Simpson said.

"We don't holler at them or tell them to hush up or anything," Benningfield quickly added.

Grateful applause comes after finishing the dreaded "sit-and-stand" exercises, a set of calisthenics no one really likes, Trent said.

"This is the one no one likes, but it does well for you in the church pew," Trent said breathlessly, talking and exercising simultaneously.

Our mirror is large enough for everyone

You think you're holding a newspaper, but in fact it's a mirror. That's my view, anyway, because my goal each week is to produce a paper that reflects the community it serves, warts and all. As you'll see in a guest column on this page and in Jess Thompson's column on the church page, there's an interesting debate going on between a self-described Christian and a self-described atheist.

What you'll read is but a sample of the actual debate. Outside of print, guest columnist Jerry Milburn and others queried me about everything from Thompson's employment status to my policies regarding our weekly church page.

One person also contends that the paper should be "secular," and we'll get to that in a bit. Let's clear up the first query first. Thompson is not employed by this newspaper, and receives no compensation for his weekly columns. Those wishing for more information about him are welcome to shoot him an email at the address listed at the conclusion of his column.

I've been asked numerous times why a person without a congregation is writing a faith column for the newspaper, so let's clear that up, too. No, Thompson's not a preacher. When he approached me about submitting faith columns, I initially balked for that very reason alone. I relented, though, mainly because local preachers who traditionally submitted columns for that space did so sporadically at best, so I gave him a shot.

At times bombastic (there I go, the pot calling the kettle black), Thompson's columns vacillate between self-effacing examinations of his own shortcomings and questionnaires designed to make others examine the depth of their individual beliefs.

What comes across is a reflection of the common person's desire to walk correctly in God's eyes while knowing full well they don't — and perhaps never will — consistently accomplish that goal.

In other words he aims that previously mentioned mirror at many of you, which is perhaps why during the past year his columns have elicited significant reader feedback.

The main criticism I've received is from those who contend — but rarely offer anything but hearsay and innuendo — that Thompson lives something other than a perfect life and therefore he should be disqualified from writing a church column.

I'm no expert on the subject, but I do recall Sunday school lessons from my youth that insisted only one has walked the earth in perfection. And while I'd be thrilled to have a weekly column penned by Jesus, I'm afraid I'll have to settle for a common sinner.

As for those policies, they are fairly straight forward but unlike the Ten Commandments certainly aren't written in stone.

The short answer is that the faith page is produced each week to reflect an overwhelmingly Christian community. Accordingly, non-Christian viewpoints belong on that page about as much as coverage of a Friday night football game belongs on the society page.

It simply doesn't fit the purpose. That football game does have a place in the paper, as do the views and opinions of those expressed this week by guest columnist Jerry Milburn. I have no desire to stifle or restrict access of those who have views contrary to this community's norms, even though I understand that some of our faithful readers may be uncomfortable — or even shocked — to read them.

As for non-Christian faiths, were there active Buddhist or Sikh or fill-in-the-blank faiths practicing in Anderson County, I'd certainly adjust those policies to give them a place in the mirror.

Lastly, I'll address the notion that this is supposed to be a secular newspaper.

If by secular he means that in news articles my staff and I should refrain from proselytizing, we already do that. That style of reporting is best left to the variety of faith-based publications that already exist.

But if secular means we should refrain from printing church news, faith columns and even information about the Christian Academy, that would only give credence to the main complaint lodged — that the newspaper is exclusionary.

Thankfully, the mirror we shine each week is plenty big enough to reflect the viewpoints of everyone and, God willing, that will never change.

Should we reward teachers based on test scores?

Once upon a time, students assured themselves an easy school year simply by placing an apple on the teacher's desk on the first day.

They could try, anyway.

But an apple a day won't keep our good teachers teaching.

Flashing shiny Apple products in their faces won't be enough, either.

So what incentives can possibly be left for teachers who see year after year of pay freezes and budget cuts?

How do we reward good teachers for a job well done, and remove the teachers who don't make the grade?

Make sure your students improve their test scores.

Obviously, this is not a new idea. The previous administration's goal with No Child Left Behind was exactly that — to get teachers and students to measure up using testing.

I've written about the danger in putting too much emphasis on testing, that promoting scores to an undue place of power increases pressure on teachers and, in turn, the students.

But apparently, if we reward the right people, public education improves.

Meaghan Downs
Staff writer

According to an educational report from South Dakota (a state that, incidentally, received a D plus for education by Education Week magazine back in January), state House representatives passed data-driven education reforms in late July designed to measure improvements and get students on track by 2015.

According to Argus Leader newspaper, South Dakota teachers' performance will be based 50 percent on administrator observations and 50 percent on yearly student-growth measures.

Some states, like Tennessee and Delaware, have attached teachers' bonus pay to improvements in students' test scores, according to the paper's report.

Why should we care about South Dakota, anyway? According to the same grading scale used by Education Week, Kentucky outstripped South Dakota, moving up 20 spots to No. 14 in the nation in the educational magazine's rankings.

But Kentucky's new Common Core Content standards will be measuring school performance based on students' standardized testing growth year to year, just like the proposed South Dakota legislation.

"Rigor" was the buzzword to describe Kentucky's Unbridled Learning initiative, the pana-

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Ramsey family thankful for community

To the editor:

We would like to thank everyone in Lawrenceburg and the surrounding communities for all of the support and love that they have shown us since the death of our son, Cody Ramsey.

We lost Cody on July 1 and it has been incredible how many people have reached out in some way or another to help us, support us, pray for us and just be there is we needed them.

We especially want to thank the teenagers of our town for being such wonderful friends to our Cody, and to thank them for giving us, his family, so much love and support.

They have been a huge help in grieving with us over the loss of our son. The community has helped in so many ways to try and get us through this horrible time. Whether it was with food or a monetary donation to help with the cost of the funeral expenses or with flowers or even words of comfort, we appreciate each and every gesture that we received. The use of the community building, which Mr. Conway donated the use of at the park, was a wonderful gesture since there were so many people that attended after the service.

We want to make sure and thank Brother Harold Garrison for doing Cody's service; it was wonderful.

Thanks, too, to Brian Ritchie and all who work at Ritchie and Peach Funeral Home. They took wonderful care of us and of Cody. Thanks to all of the pall bearers, Jordy Ramsey, Brandon Reynolds, Nic Hume, Nathan Pulcifer, Cody Meriwether, Daniel Yonts, Cody Baker and Josh Carpenter. We know it was hard for you, but we so wanted you guys to do it.

To Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church and Tyrone Baptist Church and the county employees for doing all of the preparing and serving of the food after the services. It was really appreciated.

For the wonderful show of respect and support from the city police and sheriff's office, and the ambulance, and fire departments ... we will never forget it.

To Edwardo's Pizza and Subs for holding a fundraiser and being so nice to us while we were there, and to The Anderson News for all the publicity to make sure it was a success.

And to all of the county workers who took time out of their lives to work that night. Adults and teenagers. It was very kind to do for us and for Cody.

To Nick Satterly who took the time to make the CD for Cody's funeral service. To Lucy Lou's for collecting money for us even though they were just opening. The teenagers had a hand in that I have heard as well.

We also want to thank McNew Monuments and Bush Sadler Monuments for donating the headstone for Cody's grave. We can't tell you how very much we appreciate it. To Robbie Hume, for helping to get the header for the headstone taken care of. And we don't want to forget to say thank you to the WCCW Wrestling and to Black Rain and all of the wrestlers for holding their fundraiser for us. The people who helped to gather the raffle items and the Lawrenceburg businesses that donated the items for the auction, thank you so much. It was a fun night that had us and Cody's friend's laughing and having a good time for the first time in a long while.

And a big thank you to Kasey Briscoe who took all of the handling of everything off of my shoulders and kept me sane. I can't say thank you" enough.

And to all of our close friends and family (Jennifer Goodlett) who were there when, or if, we needed anything.

There are people that did so many little things to help us that I can't list them all. We never imagined how much of an impact that Cody had on the community and all of its people.

To all of the teenagers, drive safely, and please just be careful. To everyone who saw us and said a kind word, you have our family's thanks and our gratitude for the outpouring of love and support that you have shown us.

We lost our son, but the community has done its best to get us through this and we want to make sure that you all know how much it has meant to us.

And please, if I have forgotten anyone, please forgive me, I don't mean to.

Wishing bad things for tractor thief

To the editor:

Someone stole my 8N Ford tractor in the past couple of days.

I'm sure it was a poor man needing money, but I want him to know two things: 1. You stole from a poor man. 2. It was my dad's tractor that he bought new.

After he died, I fixed it because it was his. You not only stole it from me, you broke my heart.

I hope bad things happen to you as you have caused bad things to happen to me.

Facts Christians want to ignore

Editor's note: The following is in response to faith columnist Jess Thompson's column in last week's paper titled 'Facts non-believers don't want to read.' This work originally appeared on sharksworld.com, and is reproduced with the author's permission.

I recently read an opinion piece in The Anderson News by Jess Thompson, and there seems to be some issues with his idea that non-believers don't want to read his religion's Bible.

The truth is, most non-believers read and study the Bible as much as possible, because unlike most Christians, we feel that we must first understand something before we can claim to believe it or not.

Mr. Thompson's piece basically states that Jesus did walk the Earth and it's historically proven through the Bible and his next sentence is simply "period."

Not only does this come off as arrogant, it's basically saying "Jesus existed because the Bible said he did; end of discussion." However, the discussion only begins there; Jesus actually existing is anything but historical.

The Christian Bible was written over a period of 1,400 to 1,800 years by more than 40 different authors. The Bible is a compilation of 66 separate books, divided into two primary divisions: the Old Testament (containing 39 books) and the New Testament (containing 27 books). It is believed that all of the books of the Bible were written under inspiration of the Holy Spirit.

Many people can't get through the children's game "telephone" and keep the story straight. (Telephone = game where the first person in a line of people whispers something into the next person's ear and so on down the line and then the last person compares their story to the first persons and it's usually always different.)

If the Bible were written under inspiration of the Holy Spirit, why are there over 1001 (all listed here www.1001biblecontradictions.com) contradictions? (Example - Matthew 1:16

Weeds, wildflowers thrive in dry conditions

One thing I know for sure, the drought has toughened up the weeds.

Since I mulch with newspapers and straw, I use my hands to pull up any weeds that appear in the garden. Some I leave, because the bugs like them better than anything I plant. Most others I pull and I've got the cuts on my hands to show for it.

Weeds compete for water and soil nutrients that should be going to my plants. So unless they have some other beneficial property (like attracting bugs), I pull them. This year, I've noticed that they have really put down roots. Even tugging on them in damp soil, they're tough to pull up. It's their secret to surviving.

The wildflowers along the road and in the field are a testament to survival. They have no one to tend and care for them, yet they sprout and spread. I love the chicory. The baby blue blossoms run up and down the stem and wave in the wind.

The Canada lily, and its bright orange blossoms, decorate the fence lines, though they've almost finished blooming now. Queen Anne's Lace is still going great guns. These white, round, flat headed blossoms also like to wave in the wind. Walk among a field of them and you'll find out why they are also known as chigger bushes.

Next in line for wildflower color is the pokeberry. They're putting on their deep purple berries that hang like bananas from red stalks with long, dark green leaves. The roots are poisonous, but the young shoots and leaves are edible. The seeds of the berries are slightly poisonous to humans.

If you want to color anything, from T-shirts to cement, these berries will do it. They make a beautiful dye. You can crush them in a little water and then strain out the pulp. Use a mortar and pestle-type device, not your hands or feet, to smash them. Unless, you want that "royal" look for a month.

Ironweed and common thistle are the taller kids on the block. Both put on purple blossoms, one tiny but abundant, one large and alone at the top. I love to watch the thistles disappear daily as the birds pluck them down to nothing.

cea for problematic No Child Left Behind program.

This new form of testing is supposed to be harder and take into account several categories of assessment in order to take the pressure off of schools that were unable to make all of their target goals with No Child Left Behind.

However, there are some encouraging signs that this type of data-driven teacher evaluation works.

The New York Times recently ran an editorial titled “Carrots and Sticks for School Systems,” citing a study with the New Teacher Project in which more than 20,000 teachers in urban school districts were surveyed and their students’ growth measured.

The teacher evaluations, although not as extreme as the South Dakota measurements, included a significant emphasis on a student’s growth year to year. Just like the Kentucky standards do and will do from now on.

Of the highest-performing instructors (about one-fifth of those in the study), their students learned two to three more months of math and reading than the average teacher and five to six months more of the same two subjects than low-performing instructors.

As someone who doubts the effectiveness of testing as a reliable measurement tool, this is good news.

But the study also stated teachers were unhappy with how they were rewarded for their high performance.

According to the study, nearly 10,000 high-performing teachers leave the 50 largest school districts in the country in just one year, either to move on to another school or quit teaching altogether.

It’s too early to tell if Unbridled Learning is better than No Child Left Behind, especially regarding teacher performance and evaluations. The portion of the Kentucky new assessment standard that grades teachers and administrators won’t be figured into each district’s overall score for another two or three years.

In the meantime, let’s hope we fine tune a reward system that separates the good teachers from the bad apples.

states that Joseph’s father’s name was Jacob while Luke 3:23 states that Joseph’s father’s name was Heli)

The story of Jesus was created and then passed down, from generation to generation, each changing whatever they wanted to make the story fit the time and it was done pretty sloppy at that; just the contradictions in Matthew and Luke are enough to cause you to void anything the Bible says.

I don’t believe you would allow your child to be taught from an American history text book that contained over 1,000 contradictions; so the fact that the story of Jesus was written in the Bible doesn’t mean it actually happened; if it were that simple, I could prove Batman truly existed based on comic books.

Mr. Thompson states “to anyone who reads my column, I ask you to explain how, historically, his life and excruciating death was written about or prophesized hundreds of years before his presence here on Earth.”

Well, Mr. Thompson, that is actually quite easy and it can go a few ways.

Way 1: One of the 40 different authors added it to the past books as time went

The fact that the story of Jesus was written in the Bible doesn’t mean it actually happened; if it were that simple, I could prove Batman truly existed based on comic books.

by to make the story more believable. If I tell you something happened, you may not believe me but if I show you something that was written hundreds of years ago, then you may believe me; I doubt they had CSI stuff back then to prove when and where certain things were written.

Way 2: The entire story of Jesus was stolen from a pagan god – Mithra; which was about 600 years before Christianity. (Several other gods that have similar stories.)

A statue of Mithra ... this must prove he really existed!

The only proof that Mr. Thompson uses to historically prove that Jesus existed is the Bible, but we have already determined that the Bible is full of errors and has been rewritten and misinterpreted hundreds of times (if not thousands) throughout history so that is as reliable as a Harry Potter book when it comes to being historically correct.

The facts are there, though, if you actually do research in other books besides the Bible; such facts as there are thousands of gods out there for you to choose from.

Facts also tell us that Christianity is a fairly new religion and the story of Jesus is very similar to several others that came long before he did.

There is no point of me going into each one, you do the research, it’s fun!

Once you start researching on your own and looking at information outside of the Bible, you quickly realize that everything from the birth of Jesus to the crucifixion of Jesus and all of the Christian holidays we celebrate were all stolen by Christianity in an order to destroy the pagan belief.

Religious scholars even agree that Jesus’ birthday isn’t even close to December! December was picked due to the pagans celebrating the Winter Solstice.

Of course, when you bring any of this up to a Christian, the answer is always the same: “All that stuff is lies placed here by that mean ol’ devil ... because the Bible says so.”

is goldenrod season. Another tall kid on the block, goldenrod can reach up to 6 feet with abundant yellow flowers massed together from each little stem. Pollen blows easily off the blossoms.

Sufferers should be eating local honey daily now to reduce the snuffing and sneezing.

Gardens that have survived to fruit this summer are now providing us with tomatoes, beans, squash, cucumbers and more. The melons aren’t far behind. Beans and squash don’t really have a smell, but the others do. I love the smell of a tomato plant, but even more I love the smell of a fresh cut cucumber or watermelon.

If someone wanted to bottle the smell of fresh cucumbers would be it.

The peelings are also very useful.

Scatter them around the pipes in the house where bugs like to come in and they won’t come in.

You’ll need to “refresh” them once a week for them to stay effective.

If you like to share your big watermelon with a friend or neighbor, be aware that one end is sweeter than another. Slice it long ways when cutting it in half so that each person gets part of the stem end and part of the blossom end. The blossom end is sweeter.

Now get out there in the garden and pick and pull. You’ve worked all summer to get this harvest and you sure don’t want any critters to beat you to the punch.

Happy growing.

County votes to keep property tax flat

By Ben Carlson
News staff

The Anderson County Fiscal Court voted Tuesday morning to keep real estate property taxes flat this year and to lower the rates for tangible property such as vehicles $1.51 per $1,000 assessed value.

The rate will remain $1.27 per $1,000 of assessed value on real estate, which means the owner of a home assessed at $100,000 will pay $127.

Thanks to an overall increase in the county's assessed real estate, keeping the rate flat will still generate nearly $7,000 in additional revenue.

Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway proposed increasing the rate to $1.28 per thousand, which he said would provide the fiscal court with an additional $22,000.

Following a lengthy discussion that featured Property Value Administrator Brian Stivers and Magistrate David Ruggles crunching numbers as the court discussed its options, Conway finally broke in and said he would entertain a motion to leave the real estate rate flat.

Magistrate Buddy Sims made the motion, which was approved by Conway, Sims and magistrates Kenny Barnett and Jurett Wells. Ruggles, who was still working with Stivers, voted against the motion, saying he was still considering the ramifications.

Afterward, Ruggles reminded magistrates that the expansion at Wild Turkey will not provide significant revenue to the fiscal court because of its agreement to rebate $25,000 to the distillery for each of the next eight years.

The vote to lower the tangible property rate, which was required by law based on keeping the real estate rate flat, was unanimous.

Conway said afterward that he will "try to keep providing services for the year at the current level," but said things will be tight.

"I can tell you now the zipper will be pulled a lot tighter," he said magistrates. "Remember that."

Trial date set for owner of trashed house

Hammond Road home standing despite orders to tear it down

By Ben Carlson
News staff

A trial date has been set for Sept. 12 for the owner of a dilapidated home on Hammond Road who continues to defy orders to tear it down.

District Court Judge Donna Dutton set the trial date last Thursday when the home's owner, Steve Gay, appeared in court.

The saga over the crumbling home dates back more than year. Gay was originally given 10 days to tear down the home when it was declared unsafe by the county fire chief.

It wasn't.

Gay was then cited and ordered to appear in district court, where a judge gave him until July 5 to tear it down.

That deadline passed last month and the home still stands.

Gay was put on notice last July 29 that the house had to come down after the fire chief inspected it and neighbors complained it was filled with rodents and had become a health hazard.

That constituted a Class B misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $250 per day or 90 days in jail. Each day since constitutes an additional misdemeanor charge meaning, in theory, that Gay has piled up roughly 340 additional misdemeanors by not complying with the orders.

The jail time for a misdemeanor typically does not accumulate over time, and he would likely receive a total of 90 days in jail, if sentenced. The fines, however, can accumulate and if imposed, would result in nearly $90,000 in penalties.

Tornado siren damaged near Hilltop Plaza

From staff reports

Damage to a tornado siren near Hilltop Plaza last Friday has left nearby residents looking for alternative warnings in the event of a tornado.

The siren was damaged when a nearby utility pole fell, ripping away electrical wires and other critical hardware.

The utility pole crashed to the ground, igniting several transformers. The pole, which is owned by AT&T but used by Kentucky Utilities, was scheduled to be replaced, according to Emergency Management Director Bart Powell.

He said it isn't clear what caused the pole to fall.

In the meantime, Powell said residents in that area should monitor TV, radio and other services in the event of a tornado.

Powell said the county does have an emergency call-out system similar to the one used by the school district, but it isn't activated during tornadoes.

"Typically, by the time it's activated, the event is gone," Powell said. "Although it's a very fast system, it's not as fast as tornadoes."

Powell, who said that the sirens are meant only to warn people when they are outside, said it isn't clear when the siren will be operable.

Rest assured, even atheists will meet God

I am often confused by the concept of atheism and ponder that there are those who actually reject the existence of God.

How can someone step back and look at the vastness of our world, the beauty and intricacies of nature, to see your own eyes in your child's eyes and believe this is all an accident?

To me it borders on actual hatred for God as opposed to love of him. I believe even the unreached villager in Papua New Guinea acknowledges God.

Romans 1:18-21: "The wrath of God is being revealed from heaven against all the godlessness and wickedness of people, who suppress the truth by their wickedness, since what may be known about God is plain to them, because God has made it plain to them.

"For since the creation of the world God's invisible qualities — his eternal power and divine nature — have been clearly seen, being understood from what has been made, so that people are without excuse.

"For although they knew God, they neither glorified him as God nor gave thanks to him, but their thinking became futile and their foolish hearts were darkened."

It is nothing new for people to suppress God's will and sheer existence so that they may live sinful lives.

Now, I am often charged with proving historically the existence of Christ. Those who chose not to believe do so not due to lack of evidence, but lack of willingness to believe. There is more evidence in existence than can be counted.

If I had DNA and the nails that pierced Christ Jesus' very hands they still would not believe.

To true unbelievers I point you to men like Tacitus the Roman historian who writes of Christ's life, or Jewish historian Josephus who detailed the existence of Jesus and John the Baptist.

Both of their works are considered to be scholarly and factually complete by the literary world and yet neither of them were Christians. They were written during the time of Christ. Lee Strobel (Law Defree from Yale and editor of the Chicago Tribune) over the course of almost two years sought to debunk the idea of Christ's existence. In his book "The Case for Christ" he says, 'my journalistic skepticism towards the supernatural had melted in light of the breathtaking historical evidence that the resurrection of Jesus was a real historical event.

"In fact, my mind could not conjure up a single explanation that fit the evidence of the history nearly as well as the conclusion that Jesus was who he claimed to be, the one and only son of God."

For you self-proclaiming atheists out there, let me be very clear, the same God that came to earth, hung on a cross, and died for me, died for you, too. You will meet him one day.

'SHE NEVER WORKED A DAY IN HER LIFE'

The above statement was made by a woman speaking recently against another woman. It seems she had been a stay-at-home mom most of her adult life and this woman speaking didn't believe that she would have anything to offer in the political arena. I took offense to this — not that I am a woman but because my mom stayed home with nine children, my wife stayed home with two children, my daughter stays at home with three children and my daughter-in-law stays home with her three sons.

Women who stay at home are godly women (normally) who have decided to put their children above themselves and to accept the role where God has placed them. Women who stay at home work hard every day. I also know women who work outside the home who work hard at family unity also, but many of them do not have the luxury to stay home. Most women are cooks, cleaners, mediators, shoppers, lovers of their husbands, bankers, yard persons, neighbor helpers, etc.

God spoke of the importance of women and home life in Titus 2:3-5. God through Paul called upon wives and mothers to be attentive to duties of the home and to conduct themselves in such a way that the word of God be not blasphemed. Women who accept God's role for them are normally happy and well adjusted and don't think that they have to cow-down to the feminists of this society of ours. Godly women usually train godly women and men to be all they can be.

Olympics just can't grab my attention this time
Still love the stories Gabby and Oscar wrote in London

I know I am probably in the minority but I just can't get my red, white and blue blood too worked up over the Olympics. I just can't get all excited about them anymore. I don't know why, and I can't pinpoint when it happened, but I can guarantee you I have not watched more than a few hours of the London games. Honestly, I can only take so much synchronized swimming or basketball games between two countries I have never heard of.

That's not to say there are not some compelling stories, however, Gymnastics have never been in my Top 5 sports to watch, but what the girls who compete in that sport can do at the Olympic is beyond amazing. They contort, flip and fly in ways that go beyond what my mind can comprehend.

And when I was channel surfing last week only to end up watching Gabby Douglas, I was almost mesmerized by a true American story.

Not just an American sports story, but an American story. Period.

The young lady won the individual all-around gold medal and sported one of the most beautiful smiles to ever grace my TV screen. Then she gave all of the glory to her Creator.

I am certainly no expert, but that young lady scored a 10 in my book.

Then there was the story of Oscar Pistorius. It just happened to be one of the best stories, any country, any subject, I have ever read.

In case you don't know him, Pistorius is the South African sprinter who ran in the 400-meter race over the weekend. As a child, both legs, so he was amputated near the knee, so he was running on prosthetic devices that earned him the nickname, "The Blade."

At first, he had been ruled ineligible for international track and field events, then reinstated. The issue was whether or not the prostheses, made from carbon fiber and aptly named "Cheetah Flex Feet," gave Pistorius an unfair advantage.

I am no authority on artificial legs, but my guess is the lightweight and springy artificial limbs probably did aid his times. Oscar qualified for the 400 finals over the weekend. But at the same time, the advantage could not have been enormous since he did not medal.

That, however, is not the story to me. Just the fact that he found a way to compete and be successful when he could have used the crutch of not having real legs is more than amazing.

Oscar Pistorius and his drive to succeed should be a lesson for everyone.

The real reason I have not watched much from London

If you have to ask, you are not paying attention.

The Cincinnati Reds are not only in first place in the National League Central - that is where they have been for all but five days since May 24 - but as of Monday, they have the best record in baseball, thanks to winning 22 of 25 games before losing to Pittsburgh on Sunday.

There are two reasons the Herndon satellite dish is usually tuned to Fox Sports Ohio each night this summer.

First, I have been a huge Reds fan since that day in 1964 when my parents took me to Crosley Field and I saw Vada Pinson patrol center field and Jim O'Toole pitch.

On top of that, if you can't enjoy watching this year's Reds, what can you like? They are a group that somehow just get the job done and have fun doing so. The concept of team chemistry might seem foreign in the world of a professional athlete, but the current Reds just appear to be a bunch of hard-working nice guys who are having a ball playing a game.

That is what sports should be about.

Anderson golfers looking to take next step

Bearcats have depth, looking for consistency

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Over the last few years, Anderson County has been a slice here, a bogey there from advancing to the state high school golf tournament. It would be safe to say the Bearcats are looking for straighter drives and a much stronger short game to take that next step, a step Anderson has not taken since 1994.

"I think we are going to be very good and have the potential to go to the state as a team," says new coach Jim Beward, a former assistant coach at Henry Clay High School. "This team is very deep and seven guys have shot par or under during pre-season rounds.

Beward takes over for T.J. Spivey, who decided to devote his coaching energy to tennis after two years of guiding both sports at Anderson.

"Our team's willingness to continually work on the mental and short game aspects of golf will determine whether we jump the final hurdle and go to state," Beward says.

That short game.

It is what usually separates the good from the average at any level of golf.

And it is what the Bearcats were working on last Friday, even though heavy rains had soaked the home course at Wild Turkey Trace about an hour before.

Rocky Schooley, the pro at the local course, has been working with the Bearcats on their approaches, chipping and putting since practice began on July 15. "Rocky Schooley, as the season goes on, will become important for many reasons," Beward says. "I love golf but I am not a swing doctor. When I see our players struggling with aspects of the game, they go to Rocky for assistance. He has worked with several of the players on short game aspects.

"We regularly use a chipping drill that he employs in his private lessons. Rocky has also worked with tee setups and grips - some of the guys have added length and accuracy because of his work. I'm glad that he is with us."

Qualifying as a team is very difficult, as only the top two teams from a 20-team region move on to Bowling Green.

A year ago, the Bearcats had been considered one of the better teams in

Lady Bearcats turn to former star to lead volleyball program

Being fifth coach in five years does not deter DeLong

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Five head coaches in five years is not exactly the textbook formula for building a high school sports program.

But that is Courtney DeLong's welcome to her new position as volleyball coach at Anderson County High School. DeLong, one of the best ever to serve and set for the Lady Bearcats, is undaunted.

"I think with me being new, it is different for the team," DeLong says, "but I can relate to that. When I was in high school, we had a different coach my last three years."

The Lady Bearcats were good but never enjoyed great success during DeLong's career, a record that could be partially attributed to the coaching turnover. But the fact that Anderson, which went 12-23 a year ago, has never been able to sustain any success might be an even greater issue.

"I think their biggest enemy might be themselves," DeLong says. "I had some issues with it too because you don't want to let the team down. ... You need to trust one another."

The Lady Bearcats have a key early-season district match-up on Monday, Aug. 13, when they host Shelby County at the high school.

And, DeLong says, the Lady Bearcats must take care of business against weaker teams and look for opportunities for success when things get tougher.

It was a problem the Lady Bearcats had in the Blue Grass State Games pre-season tournament.

Even though those late-July outings amounted to scrimmages - the matches do not count in the won-loss record - the Lady Bearcats were inconsistent. They had played well in several matches, including wins over Louisville Ballard, Rowan County and Madison Central. But when they ran up against perennial power Central Hardin, Anderson suddenly reverted to old habits to take a decisive whipping.

"When they saw they were playing Central Hardin, they didn't think

Public has opportunity to help researchers monitor health of Kentucky's deer herd

Ky. Dept. of Fish & Wildlife Resources report

Wildlife watchers can help researchers track and monitor the health of Kentucky's deer herd.

"For years, the Southeastern Cooperative Wildlife Disease Study Group has tracked outbreaks of EHD - or epizootic hemorrhagic disease - in deer," said Tina Brunjes, deer and elk program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

"The public can assist researchers by reporting sick animals and pinpointing locations."

life veterinarian for Kentucky Fish and Wildlife, noted that EHD has been observed annually in white-tailed deer across the southeastern United States since 1966. The disease can be fatal to deer.

"The EHD virus is transmitted by flies known as biting midges, and as a consequence, disease coincides to the presence of the competent vector," Hecht said. "These viruses do not infect humans, and humans are not at risk by handling infected deer, eating venison from infected deer, or being bitten by infected by midges."

Infected deer lose their appetites, drool excessively and lose their fear of humans. They may concentrate around farm ponds and water in an effort to reduce their body temperatures. During drought years, healthy and sick deer tend to congregate around the same watering areas, which can accelerate the transmission of the disease.

The onset of cooler temperatures in late fall usually brings a sudden end to disease outbreaks.

"We will monitor Kentucky's deer herd closely over the next few months," said Brunjes. "If we should start seeing cases of EHD in the field, we need people to let us know the location of sick animals so that we can take samples while the deer are alive."

Samples taken from sick deer will assist the Southeastern Cooperative Wildlife Disease Study Group in its efforts.

People who see sickly deer around watering areas should report the animals to Kentucky Fish and Wildlife by calling 1-800-858-1549.

Callers should be able to pinpoint the location of a sick animal. Observers may also e-mail reports to Kentucky Fish and Wildlife at: info.center@ky.gov.

about their potential,” says DeLong, whose final season as setter for the Lady Bearcats was 2004. She went on to play one season at Lindsey Wilson College before transferring to the University of Kentucky.

It was during that last year at Anderson that DeLong had much of her coaching philosophy shaped by Lindsay Barnes and her husband, the late Tommy Barnes. “She had the background of playing college volleyball,” DeLong recalls. “They pushed us quite a bit.”

Which is exactly what DeLong is attempting to instill in the 2012 version of the Lady Bearcats.

“I want them to be more aggressive,” she says. For example, DeLong, and assistant coach Bobby Hardin, who has been around the program for several years, are working on the Lady Bearcats making their passes lower so the offense can be quicker. She is also installing some different plays and attacks in an attempt to get back to the Eighth Region Tournament for the first time since 2009 and win the program’s first district championship since 2006.

While there are no established superstars, DeLong feels the program has a core group that could give two-time defending district champion Collins a run for the district crown.

It starts with a senior class that has some potential to lay a foundation for future success. Middle hitter Shelbi Savoie, at 6-foot-2, could give the Lady Bearcats an imposing presence at the net, while Liberty O’Neal (5-9) is also experienced as a blocker.

Outside hitter Bethany Hardin has potential to play collegiate volleyball while setters Ashley Couch and Suzanne Lilly are consistent.

Sophomores Rachel Swartz (5-8) and Katy Carmichael (5-9) will also play at the net, while DeLong is very high on sophomore outside hitter Baylee McKenzie.

“Baylee has already told me she wants to play volleyball in college,” DeLong says.

Defensive specialists Ragan Darst, a sophomore, and Ally Hayes, a freshman, round out the rotation expected for most matches. Both have the quickness to be effective on the back line.

“I think we can have a good defense,” DeLong says.

DeLong says juniors Brooke Marquardt and Leah Mager, both JV starters, could also see varsity action.

The questions about Anderson volleyball’s chance for success, and a possible district crown rest on the shoulders of the five seniors. “I think we have a chance,” DeLong says. “We host the district this year.”

Most of all, that chance of success

Joy of Golf tourney set for Aug. 18

The Joy of Golf girls' high school golf tournament will be held on Saturday, Aug. 18 at Wild Turkey Trace golf course. The tournament has quickly become one of the top girls' golf events in Kentucky and this year's tournament is set to feature some of the best high school teams and individuals in the state.

The tournament committee is seeking monetary contributions toward snacks, drinks and awards for the tournament. For more information or to contribute, contact Jennifer Riley at 839-3161.

Dennis Memorial Scholarship scramble set

A golf scramble to benefit the Allen Dennis Memorial Scholarship Fund will be held on Saturday, Aug. 11 at Tanglewood Golf Course in Taylorsville. The scramble will tee off at 8 a.m.

The fee for the tournament is $50 per player and will include breakfast and lunch.

Players may register by mailing a check to John Shouse, 1273 Denney Drive, Lawrenceburg, Ky., 40342. Checks should be made payable to Mt. Moriah Baptist Church.

Golfers may also sign up by phone by calling Shouse at 502-301-0188, Donnie Dennis at 502-410-8910 or Keith Stinnett at 502-664-0469.

Want to have your sports news published? Here's how

With scholastic sports teams well into pre-season practice or already starting the fall sports season, The Anderson News wants those scores and results for publication.

With a one-person sports department and scores of teams, it is impossible to get to everything, but that does not mean the information can't be published.

The easiest ways to submit scores and results is to submit information on our website at www.theandersonnews.com or e-mail Anderson News sports editor John Herndon at jpherndon@theandersonnews.com.

Digital photos submitted on the website or by e-mail are also welcomed.

The News also accepts information submitted at our office, located at 1080 Bypass South in Lawrenceburg.

Thank you for making The Anderson News your spot for Anderson County sports.

Would you like to write sports or take pictures?

The Anderson News is always looking for talented free-lance writers and photographers to help in our award-winning sports department. We currently are looking for someone to submit information or photos for teams from Anderson County Middle School and Christian Academy of Lawrenceburg.

There is no pay involved but writers and photographers will be fully credentialed and it could lead to bigger things. It is how sports editor John Herndon got his start on his career. If interested, just send him an e-mail at jpherndon@theandersonnews.com.

I'm Alive...

because someone like YOU joined the Kentucky Organ Donor Registry

At 3 months old, Katie's parents noticed the whites of her eyes were turning yellow. Katie would not survive without a liver transplant. She's alive because someone said "yes" to organ donation. Now, Katie is an 11-year-old honor student who plays basketball and goes camping.

Please give $1.00 to promote organ donation when you renew your driver's license.

PUBLIC NOTICE
Child Find for Children with Disabilities in Need of Special Education or 504 Services
Child Find
The Anderson County School District keeps educational records in a secure location in each school and Board office.
The Anderson County School District obtains written consent from a parent or eligible student (age 18 or who is attending a postsecondary institution), before disclosing personally identifiable information to an entity or individual not authorized to receive it under FERPA.
For students who have been determined eligible for Special Education, educational records will be destroyed at the request of the parents when they are no longer needed to provide educational programs or services. The Anderson County School District may destroy the educational records of a child without parent request three years after they are no longer needed to provide educational programs or services. Parents are advised that data contained in the records may later be needed for Social Security benefits or other purposes. The Anderson County School District may retain, for an indefinite period of time, a record of the student's name, address, telephone number, grades, attendance records, classes attended, grade level completed, and year completed.
Children eligible for Special Education include those children with disabilities who have autism, deaf-blindness, developmental delay, emotional-behavior disability, hearing impairment, mental disability, multiple disabilities, orthopedic impairment, other health impairment, specific learning disability, speech or language impairment, traumatic brain injury, or visual impairment and who because of such an impairment need Special Education services.
Children eligible for 504 services include those children in a public elementary and secondary education program who have a current physical or mental impairment that currently substantially limits some major life activity which causes the student's ability to access the school environment or school activities to be substantially limited.
Children eligible for the State-Funded Preschool program include three and four-year old children identified with disabilities and four-year-old children who are at-risk, as defined by federal poverty levels up to 150%. Pre-school children eligible for special education must have an Individual Education Plan (IEP) instead of a 504 plan to receive State-Funded Preschool program services.
The Anderson County School District has an ongoing "Child Find" system, which is designed to locate, identify and evaluate any child residing in a home, facility, or residence within its geographical boundaries, age three (3) to twenty-one (21) years, who may have a disability and be in need of Special Education or 504 services. This includes children who are not in school; those who are in public, private, or home school; those who are highly mobile such as children who are migrant or homeless; and those who are advancing from grade to grade, who may need but are not receiving Special Education or 504 services.
The district's "Child Find" system includes children with disabilities attending private or home schools within the school district boundaries who may need special education services.
The Anderson County School District will make sure any child enrolled in its district who qualifies for Special Education or 504 services, regardless of how severe the disability, is provided appropriate Special Education or 504 services at no cost to the parents of the child.
Parents, relatives, public and private agency employees, and concerned citizens are urged to help the Anderson County School District find any child who may have a disability and need Special Education or 504 services. The District needs to know the name and age, or date of birth of the child; the name, address, and phone number(s) of the parents or guardian; the possible disability, and other information to determine if Special Education or 504 services are needed.
Letter and phone calls are some of the ways the Anderson County School District collects the information needed. The information the school district collects will be used to contact the parents of the child and find out if the child needs to be evaluated or referred for Special Education or 504 services.
If you know of a child who lives within the boundaries of the Anderson County School District, who may have a disability, and may need but is not receiving Special Education or 504 services, please call Ramona Karsner or send the information to:

"Child Find" activities will continue throughout the school year. As part of these efforts the Anderson County School District will use screening information, student records, and basic assessment information it collects on all children in the District to help locate those children who have a disability and need Special Education or 504 services. Any information the district collects through "Child Find" is maintained confidentially.
Written Policies and Procedures have been developed which describe the district's requirements regarding the confidentiality or personally identifiable information and "Child Find" activities.
